Evil Speaks

Seven ancient gates of evil will open unless . . . a quirky group of teens can become warriors

Benny, fifteen, is solitary by circumstance more than choice: he counts each move to a new town as “a life.” He’s on life number seven. His last! He plans to run away from his paranoid mother, who’s been on the run since the disappearance of his father when he was two. Benny has no memory of it, except for weird dreams of a firestorm and a hideous dragon. After a fight with his mother, Benny packs his bags. Boom! The house explodes, catapulting Benny into a world he never imagined existed. The trail leads him to a gated Neoclassical building in the woods and to six kids he vaguely remembers: Kami is deaf, Amir is blind, Zuma is overweight, Layla is gorgeous but lazy, Chaz is in a wheelchair and Raj is as angry as the purple dagger-shaped birthmark running down the side of her face. These unlikely heroes share a common thread: Benny lost his father and they lost their mothers on the same day. The only clue to the mystery is Benny’s grandfather, Domenico H. Adez, a strange and dangerous man.

*S. Woffington is a California native. In her twenties, she lived in Saudi Arabia and England and traveled extensively. After completing UC Irvine’s Humanities Honors Program, she obtained dual masters degrees in English and Creative Writing from Chapman University. Her stay in Saudi Arabia inspired her debut novel Unveiling, which won Honorable Mention from Writer’s Digest SP book awards. She currently works as a Montessori middle school teacher and a freelance developmental editor. Her students inspired the Warriors and Watchers Saga, a seven-novel series with young heroes.*

“In my last years at Harcourt, I can’t remember reading one single fantasy MG or YA that was half as interesting as the world you have created.... So brilliant! Between the fight scenes and the stories and people and creatures..., it was truly a roller-coaster adventure.”

—Shelley, Editor of Evil Speaks
